Let's do a simplified roulette game using PHP and PhalconPHP.

You must have an account to play, so if you access anonymously, it should redirect you to the "login" page. You can register using your email, username and selecting a password. New users will be awarded with 100 chips upon registration.

The "bets" screen should open by default and show the list of people who already bet and now are waiting for the hand to start, and the number of slots available. Players are listed by username, the amount bet, and the color and number selected. Only five people can play on every hand.

To bet, you must select a color (red, black or green), a number (0 to 35) and the amount. Once your bet is registered, your name should be listed on the "bets" screen while waiting for others. Bets cannot be removed once placed. Players can only bet once at each hand.

Once the fifth player set the last bet, the game will calculate results. Guessing just the color returns your bet * 1.5. Guessing just the number returns the bet * 10. Guessing both returns the bet * 20.

Once calculations are done, the game should be open for players to bet again. Players who participated in the last hand will be redirected to a "summary" screen, displaying the color and number that came up and the winners and losers for the hand. Players must not bet again without checking the results first.

The game should have a "scoreboard" page with the color and number, winners and losers, amounts bet and won and date and time for each one of the last 20 hands played. Also, a "help" page explaining how to play, mentioning the winning percentages and asking to gamble responsible.

The interface should be very easy to use and user friendly. Use casino colors and terminology.
